

ABOUT US

San Francisco SafeHouse was founded in 1998 by Reverend Glenda Hope, a Presbyterian minister, and Sister Rosina, along with the Sisters of the Presentation, with the vision to provide a safe space for every woman experiencing homelessness and exploitation in San Francisco.

Since opening, SFSH has provided housing and services to over 1,240 women and their children and over 266,400 nights of safety through our programs.

*Although founded by women of faith, SFSH is not a religious organization in itself.

SAN FRANCISCO

works to empower and support unhoused women who are experiencing sexual exploitation or trafficking.

We provide safe housing, survivor-centered services, advocacy, and community education.

The Hope Center

Drop in Support Services for Survivors

The Hope Center is an inclusive and safe drop-in space where women have access to a web of services.

Survivors will find a community here where they can receive practical and emotional support.

Bridge Housing for Women and Children

Doors Opening in 2027

Starting early 2026, a 23-unit building in Hayes Valley will be renovated to become one of the first supportive housing programs in San Francisco dedicated to serving survivors and their children.

"I want to express my deepest gratitude to San Francisco SafeHouse, which gave me a life-changing opportunity to reclaim my life after my experience of trafficking."

SafeHouse taught me independence, confidence, and security—things I'd lost. With their support, I gained the tools to live on my own, secure a job, and move into my own apartment."
